The Salvation Army broke ground on the Ray and Joan Kroc Corps Community Center on the South Side of Chicago at the site of the future Kroc Center, 1250 W. 119th Street in West Pullman. Joined by Illinois Governor Pat Quinn, Mayor Richard M. Daley and Alderman Carrie Austin, as well as hundreds of community residents, donors and supporters, The Salvation Army celebrated a major step toward realizing the vision of the state-of-the-art facility that will include the largest array of sports, arts, educational and supportive programs anywhere in the city.

The Center has the potential to make a tremendous impact on the far South Side, with a particular focus on the serious issues of community violence and job loss. Helping to build a safer community will be a priority for the Kroc Center. More than 250,000 people live within a three-mile radius of the site. More than a third is under age 18. About 2,500 peo-

Center will provide a hope and a haven in response to the violence we see in the streets. The Kroc Center will allow dreams to stay alive."

The Kroc Center will create about 220 construction jobs during its two-year construction phase. Once open, it will create more than 200 permanent, full- and part-time jobs. The Kroc Center will provide job readiness and training programs. It is also expected to improve the economic stability of the surrounding neighborhood. Like the Kroc Center in San Diego, California, the Chicago Kroc Center is expected to attract new business, create hundreds of jobs, increase economic stability and lower crime rates.

A Destination for the Entire Family

When completed, the Kroc Center will offer a wide array of activities and services for people of all ages, making the Kroc Center a unique destination for the entire family. Proposed programs and ministries include opportunities for worship, educational classes, sports, arts and support programs. Recreational features will include an indoor sports complex, an outdoor stadium, basketball and tennis courts, an aquatic center and a water park, a state of the art fitness center, a climbing wall, basketball courts and more. Outdoor recreational facilities will include a sports stadium, a golf training center, baseball diamonds, batting cages, tennis courts and running track.

The Family Life and Education Center will offer an array of classes and educational workshops for people of all ages, including job training, GED preparation, tutoring, computer literacy, financial planning, parenting classes and health screenings.

The Kroc Center's Academy of the Arts will include a performing arts center; an outdoor amphitheater; a media center with recording video production studios; as well as studios for instrument, vocal and art instruction.

A Wide Variety of Programs Already Underway

The Army has put together a Kroc Project Team of instructors and program officers who, for the past three years, has been running a wide range of arts, educational, sports and after-school programs and summer camps for students at three schools near the Kroc

Center site: Higgins Community Academy, Johnnie Coleman Academy and Fenger Academy High School. The Salvation Army Kroc Center Project Office has been open for more than a year, at 11357 S. Halsted, as a base of operations for the Kroc project team.

Completion of the Kroc Center is expected in 2012. For more information about The Kroc Center, visit www.kroccenterchicago.org.
